Corrie ten Boom was born in the Netherlands in 1892. She was the youngest of four children, and she grew up in a loving and supportive family. Corrie's father was a watchmaker, and her mother was a devout Christian. Corrie's parents instilled in her a strong faith in God, and she grew up to be a kind and compassionate woman.

In 1940, the Netherlands was invaded by Nazi Germany. Corrie and her family were forced to go into hiding, as they were Jewish. They lived in a secret room in their home for over two years, and they were constantly in fear of being discovered.

In 1944, Corrie and her family were betrayed, and they were arrested by the Nazis. They were sent to a concentration camp, where they were subjected to unimaginable horrors. Corrie's father and sister died in the camp, and Corrie herself was nearly starved to death.

Despite the horrors she experienced, Corrie never lost her faith in God. She found hope and healing in the love of her fellow prisoners, and she learned to forgive her captors.

In 1945, Corrie was liberated from the concentration camp. She returned to the Netherlands, and she dedicated her life to helping others. She traveled the world, sharing her story of hope and healing. Corrie ten Boom died in 1983, but her legacy continues to inspire people around the world.
